How a golden retriever saved the life of an abandoned

baby koala September 27, 2018

A golden retriever has been hailed a hero after saving an abandoned baby koala's life by letting it snuggle in her fur. Proud dog owner Kerry McKinnon, 45, got the shock of her life after discovering the tiny koala joey snuggled up with her five-year-old Golden Retriever Asha on Monday. The mum-of-three, from Strathdownie in Victoria, said the koala likely became separated from its mother during the night and wandered onto her back porch, finding comfort in Asha's warm fur. Temperatures in the area dropped to 5 degrees. Ms. McKinnon said the helpless koala joey "never would have made it through the night" if it hadn't been cuddled up to Asha.

"It was quite early in the morning, and my husband yelled out to me to come have a look at something," she said. "I didn't know what he was talking about at first but then I saw this tiny koala snuggled on top of Asha. Ms. McKinnon said she burst out laughing and her "poor" dog "didn't know what to think" and appeared confused.

"She looked a bit guilty when I came out to see what was going on. Her expression was hilarious," she said. "She kept looking back at the koala but she wasn't trying to get him off her or anything. She was happy to let him snuggle into her."

Ms. McKinnon believes the koala fell out of its mother's pouch and may have wondered over to the family's back porch to where the dogs sleep. "Asha definitely saved the koala's life by keeping him warm," she said. "He would have died out there if left alone all night. The poor thing could have been taken by a fox or something too."

The 45-year-old said it wasn't easy trying to separate the two – with the koala putting up a "huge fuss" when she tried to remove it from Asha's back. She added the little joey is doing well after being checked out by a vet – and is now being looked after by a local koala caretaker until it can be released back into the wild. Source: Caters

Little Changes Make Big Differences... Or - YOU - Indicating that You are the Pack Leader By Jean Bates

The following alterations to your daily routine are usually employed when raising a puppy, However, it's never too late to try and remold your dominant dog's behavior. You buy his dog food, pay his vet's bill, take him to interesting places and see to his general well-being, so YOU are leader of the pack.

Never forget that dogs are pack animals and in the absence of four legged pack mates, we humans become the substitute pack. It is the most natural thing in the world for the adolescent puppy to try to infiltrate himself as leader. In actual fact he would probably be miserable as leader but instinct tells him to try and take over.

With this thought in mind remember......alpha goes first. This is implemented at door ways. You will probably have to do it many times before he does it. Let him wear a short leash or some kind of a tab attached to his collar. Sit him couple of feet back from the door. Holding leash in one hand, open door a little way with the other, the minute dog starts towards door slam it shut and tell him "no, sit" in no uncertain terms. Once you have him sitting do it again until you can go through the door without him getting up. Once you are through face him a second or two before inviting him through.

The only time your dog may precede you when entering the house is if you are returning home and suspect there might be a burglar in the house. THEN you let dog in first and watch his behavior.

When going for a walk, if he selects tree to left to lift his leg......you take him to tree on the right. When crossing roads always make him sit first while YOU look both ways.

When feeding feed in crate. Leave food down 20 to 30 mins. Then pick up.

You win all games. If he likes to retrieve and is tired after 20 throws you stop at 18 and you keep the toy/ball, bumper.

No tug of war until you have him releasing on command.

If you are crossing a room and dog is in the waymake him get up and move.

Do not allow him to get into, or out of, vehicle until you say so.

No treats unless dog earns them by sitting, coming when called, downing, or something. No free hand outs.

Preferably not allowed on furniture but if it is permissable, then only occasionally and at your invitation.

No free feeding. If food not eaten in 20 or 30 mins. then pick it up and store it until next meal time.

The daily walk......'dog either walks beside you or slightly behind NEVER IN FRONT.

Always be sure your dog has plenty of exercise. Whenever possible take him places. Keep him exercised and mentally stimulated.

If you have a doggie door and free feed you really are not needed for the dog's survival.

When praising your dog for anything use verbal praise. Throw a toy for him. Many dogs don't enjoy hands on praise and having your hands all over them puts you in a submissive light. Think about the dog that goes up to the alpha dog, lowers it's body, and bats at it with a paw wanting to play. Dogs don't sit around in the wild petting each other. Humans pet dogs for their own gratification. An active dog would rather you threw his ball or frisbee 50 times than subject him to being petted.

Hugging a dog is a big no no in many cases. You make the dog feel trapped and his instincts scream escape! Many little dogs hate being picked up...humans swoop down and grab them in their talons like a giant condor!

Start thinking about life from Fido's point of view. Be a pack leader. Do not anthropomorphize your dog. Think about what your dog was bred for and try to use those instincts to your advantage as pack leader.

Enjoy life with your dog. Hopefully he will be around for many years.

Puppy Referral

From Michele Throm

How much is that Doggie in the Window? The surprising economics of purchasing a purebred puppy...

By Allen St. John – 2/17/2012 Forbes

Attention breeders: Please let Michele Throm know about your upcoming litters or breeding plans. We are constantly getting inquiries for golden retriever puppies. The following is an article she shares with people for puppy referral – interesting reading.

By Allen St. John – 2/17/2012 Forbes

The song got it right. As much as dog lovers melt over a cute, cuddly puppy, when it comes time to actually buy a dog, price sensitivity enters into it. In a recent, very popular post about the Westminster Dog show, I talked about getting my now-three-year-old golden retriever Tessie. As we shopped for a breeder, I discovered that Golden puppies ranged in price from around $500 for a dog from a backyard breeder or a pet store to upwards of $3,000 for a show quality pup from a top breeder.

I'll admit now that price was a very important parameter back then. I will also admit now, that while we made an amazingly great choice, I was also really stupid.

Here's the truth in one sentence: The initial purchase price of a dog is a drop in the bucket compared to the other expenses of dog ownership. Let's do the math. A $900 dog from a puppy mill costs 21 cents a day over the puppy's 12-year life span. A $2,000 dog from a quality breeder costs 45 cents a day. The difference is less than a quarter a day. And what does that 24 cents buy for your dog? A small handful of supermarket kibble. But what are you getting for your money with the more expensive dog? No doubt about it, golden retriever puppies are among the cutest creatures on earth. When I walked Tessie when she was little, and groups of squealing 16-year-old girls flocked over to pet her, I understood how Brad Pitt must feel. And the cheaper puppy is going to be just as adorable as the more expensive one.

A quality breeder does two important things. He (or she) has the potential parents checked for heart problems, eye problems, and hip problems, and if the dogs don't get these clearances, they're not bred. They also breed for temperament, and can tell you if a dog from any given litter is likely to be a drivey hunting dog or laid-back, lick-your-face couch queen. Most importantly, parents with behavioral problems--from biting to skittishness--don't make it to the breeding pool.

And if a $900 puppy mill dog ends up with hip dysplasia or a heart condition or a thyroid condition, you could easily swallow that $1,100 difference in a single vet visit, and still have a dog with a shortened life, or a compromised quality of life. And while quality breeders will offer a refund if your puppy has a serious health problem, the far better alternative is not having to use that guarantee. Good breeders aren't cheap or easy to find, but they tend to be cheaper than the best dog hip surgeon, or the best canine behaviorist.

This isn't theoretical. A member of a golden retriever forum in which I'm a member told this sad tale. She got her puppy from a backyard breeder, a casual breeder who doesn't do the cruel, large-scale, for-profit breeding of a puppy mill that feeds to pet stores, but also doesn't do medical or behavioral clearances on the parents. The owner of the new puppy felt proud at having haggled down the price on her dog from $550 to $300. That lovely cute puppy ended up needing double hip surgery at eight months. Needless to say, her vet bill ate up her savings tenfold or more. And even after thousands of dollars of veterinary care, the poor puppy still will never romp that Tessie does.

No, buying from a quality breeder doesn't guarantee your dog will be healthy and well-adjusted, but having four or five generations of checkable health and behavioral clearances has to increase your chances of having a healthy, happy dog. And for a quarter a day, it seems like very cheap insurance.

Having given you the actuarial analysis, let me provide a real-world example of the cost of raising a dog, and how quickly it can outstrip the initial purchase price of the puppy.

We spent $1,200 for Tessie from a high-quality breeder, a price which is a little on the low side for the New York Metro area.

She's a beautiful, sweet-tempered dog, and at three years of age, she's been completely healthy, with nothing more than routine vet visits (with one exception noted below.)

In the first four months we had Tessie, this is what we spent.

Gating an already fenced-in backyard: $1,350 Crates and interior gates: $180 Routine vet visits and vaccines: $270 Emergency vet visits (she ate a sock): $1,100 Dog Food (Purina Pro Plan): $160 Toys, chewies, Bowls, Kongs: $160 Puppy Kindergarten: $140 Mileage to buy all this: $300 Total TOT -1.27%: $3,660

We spent more than triple the purchase price in only the first four months of having our pup, and we were really did pinch our pennies, buying only what was really necessary.

Tessie's "ate a sock" adventure was the only thing that wasn't "normal" but she didn't have to have surgery, and it's not a particularly unusual expenditure either. And unlike most pups, Tessie didn't chew anything of value—like a Coach COH +0% briefcase, a Manolo Blahnik sling back, or the AC adaptor to a Macbook Pro--which could be added into the equation.

Even if you remove the emergency vet bill, you're at $2,560, double the purchase price.

It's easy to forget how expensive it can be to own a dog. Even for a healthy, low maintenance young dog like Tessie, we still spend well over $1,000 a year on food, vet bills, and other sundries, and we bathe and groom her ourselves. In the context of this substantial, ongoing "cost of ownership," the initial purchase price is insignificant. Skimping on the purchase price when there are health and temperament issues at stake strikes me as penny wise and pound foolish.

Or to put it another way. If you're making your decision based on a few hundred dollars of initial purchase price of a puppy, the cold, hard truth is that you probably can't afford the dog at all. ■

BOARD MEMBERS

Robin (Lemieux) Burket -

A new member of the board in 2018, Robin has been breeding Goldens on a limited basis since 2005. An animal lover her entire life, she started at three years old begging her father for horse riding lessons and a dog, checking out every library book she could find and reading about all the dog breeds, their care, training and health. She decided that Goldens are the perfect breed for her and when she started high school, she got her first one. From that point on, she was hooked. She grooms and shows her own dogs, and is always looking to learn and improve. She studied abroad in Europe in 2004 and met several breeders, developing friendships and being mentored by breeders who have been working with Goldens for longer than she's been alive. Her puppies have gone on to be master hunters, therapy dogs, service dogs, obedience dogs as well as family pets. Robin works as a nurse and her husband is a wildlife photographer. They live in Orlando.

Patricia (Pat) Kopco -

A member of the MFGRC since 1994, Pat has served the club as president and as a board member. She currently has four dogs that all do or will compete in field, obedience and conformation. Pat is a divorce lawyer and former prosecutor and before she went to law school, she worked for NBC News for 15 years based in Miami covering Latin and South America. She lives in Dover, FL.

She has been the proud owner/coowner of five dogs from Magik Goldens over the years and has done Rally, Obedience, Tracking, and Conformation with her Goldens. Her most proud moments in the ring came when her boy Kasey, most often along with his brothers Jack and Chippie, helped their awesome dad, Stetson, win the Stud Dog class over the years at specialties and once at the International show in 2007. "I was not an official co-owner of Stetson but I loved him dearly and those were very happy, proud moments when he won that class with Kasey in the ring with him," she said. Betty has worked for the Osceola County Sheriff's Office for 20 years and is a Human Resources Specialist but works primarily in recruiting and background investigations, processing applicants hoping to be hired as sworn law enforcement officers.

She has trained and handled two dogs (mother and daughter) that are members of the Dual Dog Hall of Fame (breed championship and Master Hunter) and she is working on her third. Her first to finish her breed championship did so by winning back to back five-point specialty majors (owner handled) at the MFGRC specialty and the eastern regional in 2012 and earned her MH shortly after. Her daughter finished her MH in the spring of 2014 and her CH that same fall. Kristin has a degree in Equine Science and Stable management.
